A DOMESTIC & SEXUAL VIOLENCE
PREVENTION & RESOURCE GUIDE

Dear Friend,

Domestic and sexual violence affects females and males of all ages in our communities. Throughout the last decade, Michigan lawmakers have taken a leadership role in enacting legislation to ensure the safety of our citizens. National and statewide legislation has effectively assisted victims of domestic violence, lessened the leniency for their offenders, and helped to reduce the stigma of abuse.

This publication contains information and prevention resources for any individual affected by domestic and sexual violence. Specific topics include the updated requirements for Michigan's campuses regarding sexual assault, warning signs of domestic violence and teen dating violence, information regarding drug-facilitated rapes and sexual assault prevention, facts on human trafficking, stalking and cyberstalking, abuse reporting procedures, as well as a parent and guardian's section, suggestions for helping a friend in an abusive situation and what to consider when leaving an abusive relationship.

Throughout this publication, many national, state and local crisis hotlines, professional domestic violence organizations and shelter information have been compiled for your quick reference.

It is hopeful that this prevention and resource guide will provide you or someone you know with invaluable information.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

You Are Not Alone. There is Help.

No one wants to admit they may be in an abusive relationship. When you are hurt by someone you love, you may feel like you are the only one this happens to. Know that you are not alone, and there is help available.

What is Domestic Violence?

Domestic violence is a pattern of assaultive and controlling behaviors that one person uses against another in order to gain or maintain power in an intimate relationship.

Domestic violence, also known as intimate partner violence (IPV), is abuse committed by a current or former intimate partner or spouse, boyfriend or girlfriend, dating partner or sexual partner, or by a partner with whom there is a child in common. IPV can occur between heterosexual or same-sex couples and does not require sexual intimacy.

IPV can vary in frequency and severity and the abuse can include physical and sexual assaults, emotional abuse, social isolation, financial control, coercion, threats, use of children, stalking, intimidation, and abuse of pets and other animals. These are examples of tactics used by an abuser to control another person. Some forms of IPV can also be committed electronically through mobile devices and social media sites.

Domestic abuse can happen to anyone regardless of age, gender, race, culture or religion. It occurs in communities across all economic, ethnic, educational, and marital status groups, however, data has shown many minority groups are disproportionately affected by IPV.

The Michigan State Police reported 88,464 victims of domestic violence in Michigan during 2017. (This number is down from 95,024 victims reported in 2011.)

Who is an Abuser?

There is no “typical” abuser. The most commonly reported abuser is a husband, ex-husband, or current or former intimate partner. Abuse is a choice. The abuser may use their violent family history as an excuse to validate why they abuse. They may seem friendly and loving to their partner in public, but abuse in private. Abusers often cause injuries that can be concealed and do not need a doctor.

Abusers may also place blame on those they abuse; they may be manipulative in all of their relationships and have strong verbal persuasiveness skills. Some abusers feel it is their “right to discipline” their partners and rarely do they see their behavior as a problem. A common excuse is that they “lost control,” when actually they use abuse to gain control over their partner.

Generally, abusers continue their behavior unless apprehended, convicted, and successfully treated. Even if their victim leaves, many abusers continue to harass, threaten and assault them. If an abuser becomes involved with someone else, it is likely his or her battering tactics will continue.

Who is Affected?

Both men and women can be victims of intimate partner violence (IPV), which also includes the abuse of children, siblings, and elderly persons. Nearly one in four adult women and approximately one in seven men in the U.S. report having experienced severe physical violence from an intimate partner in their lifetime.<sup>1</sup> Nearly half of all women and men (47%) have experienced psychological aggression, such as humiliating or controlling behaviors, from their partners.<sup>2</sup>

Even if children are not involved or do not witness the abuse firsthand, they are almost always aware of it. According to data from The National Intimate Partner and Sexual Violence Survey (NISVS), intimate partner violence often begins in adolescence. Childhood exposure to violence between parents and experiencing child abuse firsthand are just two factors that may put individuals at risk for later committing IPV. Millions of women and men report first experiencing IPV before the age of 18.<sup>3</sup>

Abusive Behaviors to Watch For

Abusers will attempt to control their partners in a variety of ways.

The following is a list of some common abusive behaviors.

USE OF ISOLATION — The abuser may try to cut off your relationships from family and friends, limit your outside involvement in events or activities, limit use of a vehicle, behave jealously and be suspicious of you.

ECONOMIC — The abuser may control all aspects of the finances and deny you access to bank accounts, cash and credit cards; prevent you from getting or keeping a job; keep you from going to school and limit your health prescriptions and dental insurance.

Victims of abuse often report their partners stating “No one else will ever want you”, or “If I can’t have you, no one else can”.

EMOTIONAL — The abuser may try to manipulate your emotions, be hypersensitive and get easily insulted and/or overreact, try to humiliate or ridicule you in public, may play “mind games” to make you feel bad or guilty, threaten to expose your weaknesses or spread rumors about you.

INTIMIDATION — The abuser may use threatening behavior or verbal aggression; abuse pets and/or other animals; strike or throw objects at or near you; destroy property, especially beloved possessions.

How the abuser chooses to react or behave is not your fault.

You may hear from your abuser’s relatives or ex-partners that they have used force with other dating partners before.

COERCION — The abuser may threaten to find someone else if you don’t comply with their demands, they may involve the children, threaten to harm themselves or commit suicide if you break off the relationship.

DENY, OR BLAME OTHERS — The abuser may tell you it’s your fault and blame everyone else for their problems, including you, for “making them angry,” or for “making them hurt you”.

DUAL PERSONALITY — The abuser may have sudden mood changes and appear to be two different people; they may act differently in public than when alone with you.

PHYSICAL — The abuser may physically assault you by one or more actions such as hitting, shoving, grabbing, slapping, strangling, burning, biting, kicking; or may use force during an argument such as holding you down or restraining you.

SEXUAL ACTIVITY — The abuser may coerce or force you to engage in unwanted sexual activity, may use drugs or alcohol to impair you in order to have sex, may refrain from using birth control or allowing you to use it in an attempt for you to become pregnant.

STRICT GENDER ROLES — The abuser may want to enforce their idea of gender-specific duties in the home and with other family members, may make everyone obey all directions, and become possessive or angered if challenged.

Every person is worthy of respect, to be treated equally, and to have control over one’s own body and self.

Common Myths and Why They are Wrong

MYTH: “Domestic violence happens only to poor women and women of color.”

TRUTH: Domestic violence can happen to persons of any class, culture, religion, sexual orientation, marital status, age, or gender.

However, data shows that contact sexual violence, physical violence or stalking by an intimate partner is experienced disproportionately by many racial/ethnic groups:<sup>4</sup>

- 57% among multi-racial women
- 42% among multi-racial men
- 48% among American Indian/Alaska Native women
- 41% among American Indian/Alaska Native men
- 45% among non-Hispanic Black women
- 40% among non-Hispanic Black men
- 37% among non-Hispanic White women
- 30% among non-Hispanic White men
- 34% among Hispanic women
- 30% among Hispanic men

Additionally, the NISVS special report on victimization by sexual orientation demonstrates that some sexual minorities are also disproportionately affected by IPV:<sup>5</sup>

- 61% of bisexual women
- 37% of bisexual men
- 44% of lesbian women
- 26% of gay men
- 35% of heterosexual women
- 29% of heterosexual men

In 2015, the rate of violent crimes against persons with disabilities (age 12 or older) was 2.5 times higher than the rate for persons without disabilities. During 2011-2015, persons with cognitive disabilities had the highest rates of total violent crimes among disabled individuals. Males and females had similar rates of total violent victimization, with the exception of those with independent living disabilities, in which females had a higher rate.<sup>6</sup>

Men and women can contact the National Domestic Violence Hotline at 1-800-799-SAFE.

MYTH: “Domestic violence is not a problem in my community.”

TRUTH: In 2017, the Michigan State Police reported 88,464 victims of domestic violence with crimes reported in all 83 Michigan counties including a total of 105 fatalities.<sup>1</sup>

MYTH: “Domestic violence is a personal problem between spouses, or partners, and it doesn’t affect me.”

TRUTH: Nearly all victims report that violence at home affects their ability to perform their job duties. Women victims of domestic violence had a 26% higher rate of absenteeism and tardiness than non-victims.<sup>2</sup>

The annual cost of lost productivity is estimated at $727.8 million, with over 7.9 million paid workdays lost each year.<sup>3</sup>

MYTH: “If it were that bad, she would just leave.”

TRUTH: Abusers are very good at making victims think that the abuse is their fault. Victims often stay because they are made to think they cannot survive on their own. Abusers may also create a financial situation that makes leaving nearly impossible.

There are many reasons why victims may not leave:

- Economic dependency.
- Lack of work experience.
- Forced isolation from family, friends, and outside support.
- Children may create a hesitancy to leave or separate from the abuser.
- Guilt may make the victim feel responsible for keeping the family together.
- Some victims may be immobilized by fear.
- May still love the abuser and/or believes they will change.
- Leaving is the most dangerous time for victims as many abusers escalate their violence upon separation. Abusers may threaten to hunt down their victims in order to harm or kill them. This threat is very real.

MYTH: “Intimate partner violence doesn’t happen to men.”

TRUTH: 1 in 18 men are severely injured by intimate partners in their lifetimes.<sup>7</sup> 1 in 9 men experience severe intimate partner physical violence, intimate partner contact sexual violence, and/or intimate partner stalking. Impacts from this violence such as injury, fearfulness, post-traumatic stress disorder, use of victim services, and contraction of sexually transmitted diseases, are examples reported. This is commonly considered “domestic violence”.<sup>8</sup>

It can sometimes be even more difficult for male victims to come forward due to social stigmas surrounding stereotypical gender roles. But it is important to know that there are domestic violence programs in the state that provide services to ANY victim of domestic violence, regardless of gender.

ABUSE is Used to Maintain

Abuse can take the form of physical assaults such as slapping, pushing, kicking, punching, strangling or striking someone in any way. All forms of abuse are intentional tactics used by the abuser to entrap their partner in the relationship. The abuser is the only one who can choose to stop their violent behavior.

TYPES OF ABUSE	ECONOMIC CONTROL	ISOLATION/ EXCLUSION	SEXUAL COERCION
E X A M P L E S  O F  A B U S E	Forbidding you to work or sabotaging employment opportunities	Controlling what you do, who you see or talk to, what you read, or where you go	If you are a woman, purposefully getting you pregnant

There are Laws to Protect You

In 1978, the Michigan Legislature enacted the first of several aggressive statutes dealing with the plight of domestic violence victims. In 1994, many public acts imposing even more stringent laws were passed, making our state a leader in the fight against domestic violence.

Today, every county in Michigan is covered by a domestic violence program that includes shelter, crisis intervention centers and telephone hotlines.

The Michigan Coalition to End Domestic & Sexual Violence (MCEDSV) was established in 1978 to speak on behalf of victims of abuse statewide. Comprised of shelters, service providers, and other concerned individuals, MCEDSV is now part of a national movement working to prevent and eliminate abuse by increasing awareness and coordinating the exchange of skills, information, and resources.

Also in 1978, legislation established the governor-appointed Michigan Domestic and Sexual Violence Prevention and Treatment Board (MDSVPTB) within the Michigan Department of Health and Human Services. The Board administers state and federal funds appropriated to support community-based shelter, counseling, and advocacy services. The Board works collaboratively to develop and implement policies and training for law enforcement, the courts, and human services, as well as advises the legislature regarding domestic and sexual violence issues.

Listed below are just a few of Michigan's laws pertaining to domestic and sexual violence. If you would like more information or the full text of the law, please visit the Michigan Legislature's website at www.legislature.mi.gov.

Please note: The laws listed below should not be used in place of legal counsel or the advice of a domestic violence professional. Information current at the time of printing.

SIMPLE AND AGGRAVATED DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

MCL 750.81 – 750.81a

Simple domestic assault is defined as: an assault or assault and battery committed against a current or former spouse, an individual with whom the defendant has had a child, or a current or former resident of the offender's household.

Increased penalties are provided for aggravated domestic assault, defined as an assault without a weapon which inflicts serious or aggravated injury.

ASSAULT AND BATTERY; "DATING RELATIONSHIP" DEFINED

MCL 750.81(2), (7)

This Michigan law defines an individual who assaults or assaults and batters his or her spouse or former spouse, an individual with whom he or she has or has had a dating relationship, an individual with whom he or she has had a child in common, or a resident or a former resident of his or her household is guilty of a misdemeanor or felony, and is punishable by imprisonment or fines, or both.

According to this law, "dating relationship" means frequent, intimate associations primarily characterized by the expectation of affectional involvement. This term does not include a casual relationship or an ordinary fraternization between two persons in a business or social context.

ARREST WITHOUT A WARRANT; ASSAULT AND BATTERY OR INFLECTION OF SERIOUS INJURY WITHIN HOUSEHOLD

MCL 764.15a

This law is commonly known as the domestic violence warrantless arrest statute. It allows the peace officer to make an arrest if the officer has "reasonable cause" to believe that an assault has taken place, or is taking place, and the person who committed the violation and the victim has had a child in common, resides or has resided in the same household as the victim, has or has had a dating relationship, or is a spouse or former spouse of the victim. Under these circumstances, the peace officer may arrest the suspect without a warrant, and regardless of whether the violation was committed in the presence of the officer or not.

PERSONAL PROTECTION ORDERS

MCL 552.14; 600.2950; 600.2950a

A victim of assault or stalking may obtain a personal protection order to restrain the person who committed the offense from doing one or more of the following:

- 1) entering onto premises;
- 2) assaulting, beating, molesting, or wounding the victim;
- 3) threatening to kill or physically injure the victim;
- 4) removing minor children from the person having legal custody in violation of a custody or parenting time order issued by the court;
- 5) engaging in stalking behavior;
- 6) purchasing or possessing a firearm;
- 7) interfering with the victim's efforts to remove the victim's children or personal property from premises solely owned or leased by the person to be restrained;
- 8) harassing or interfering with the petitioner at his or her place of employment;
- 9) any other specific act or conduct that interferes with personal liberty or that causes a reasonable apprehension of violence.

The personal protection order may be obtained regardless of marital status as long as the victim and abuser resided in the same household at some time, have a child in common, or have had a dating relationship. The circuit court provides standardized forms to obtain a personal protection order and may provide assistance in completing the forms. Your local domestic violence program can also help with this.

The court must issue a personal protection order if there is reasonable cause to believe that the individual to be restrained or enjoined may commit one or more specified acts (numbered 1-9 above), or the court will state in writing the specific reasons why the order was refused. A personal protection order may not be made mutual unless separate orders are issued on the basis of petitions by both parties. A personal protection order is effective immediately and instantly enforceable anywhere in Michigan when signed by the judge.

Whether the order has been served or not, the court clerk is directed to send it to the designated law enforcement agency when the judge signs it. It is important to keep a true copy of the order with you at all times. You can also make additional copies. The police are allowed to enforce a personal protection order if they either have a copy of it, see a copy of it, or learn of its existence through the Law Enforcement Information Network (LEIN). Any law enforcement agency receiving a copy of the order must immediately enter it into the Law Enforcement Information Network.

VIOLETIONS OF A PERSONAL PROTECTION ORDER

MCL 600.295(18), (22); 600.2950a; 764.15

If an individual has not been personally served with a copy of the personal protection order, a law enforcement agency responding to a domestic violence call must either serve the enjoined individual with a copy of the order, or advise the individual that the order exists. Additionally, the attacker or stalker must be told how to obtain a copy of the order, what conduct is prohibited, the penalties imposed for violation of the order, and what is necessary to comply. If an individual fails to comply, law enforcement officers can make an arrest for violation of the order.

If an individual has been personally served, a police officer may make an arrest without a warrant if the officer has reasonable cause to believe that any or all prohibitions of a personal protection order have been violated.

CRIMINAL SEXUAL CONDUCT STATUTE

MCL 750.520b(1)

There are four degrees of criminal sexual conduct.

First and third degrees involve forced or coerced sexual penetration usually known as rape. This can involve vaginal, anal, or oral penetration, or putting a finger or object in another person's genital or anal opening.

Second and fourth degrees involve forced or coerced sexual contact. This includes touching the groin, genital area, inner thigh, buttocks, or breasts, or the clothing covering those parts.

How prosecutors decide which degree to charge a defendant with depends on a number of factors such as: more than one rapist; a weapon used; a physical injury other than the rape; extortion; the element of surprise; if the victim is under 13 years of age; the rapist is a member of the family, or has a position of authority.

Criminal sexual conduct does not require a witness other than the survivor. It is still a crime if the rapist is your spouse.

Below is one of Michigan's laws that pertains to the crime of stalking. If you would like more information or the full text of the law, please visit the Michigan Legislature's website at www.legislature.mi.gov.

STALKING

MCL 750.411h(d), (e)(i-vii), (2a-b), (3a-c)

Stalking is defined as a willful course of conduct involving repeated or continuing harassment of another individual that would cause a reasonable person to feel terrorized, frightened, intimidated, threatened, harassed, or molested, and that actually causes the victim to feel terrorized, frightened, intimidated, threatened, harassed, or molested.

Behavior such as following the victim, showing up at the victim's home or work, approaching or confronting the victim in public or in private, making unwanted calls or sending mail or electronic communications, or leaving objects or "presents" for the victim at home, work, on/in the car, or other property can be used as evidence of stalking.

An individual who engages in stalking is guilty of a crime as follows: a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment for not more than 1 year and/or a fine of up to $1,000 and under certain circumstances a felony, punishable for not more than 5 years and/or a fine of up to $10,000. An individual found guilty of stalking may be put on probation for up to 5 years and must refrain from stalking any individual or having any contact with the victim of the offense. Mandatory counseling may be ordered for the individual at his or her own expense.

MY STORY

A True Account of Abuse

THE LAST TIME

"I said to myself—this is it. This is it." Judith's* husband, after a brutal beating, had barricaded her in their house, and would not let her leave, or let anyone take her out. Thoughts of an abused woman she had known from church passed through Judith's mind. She too had been barricaded in her home by her husband, but that woman had not made it out. "When you know they're serious—when they say they're going to take your life," Judith says very slowly and deliberately, "what do you do? My husband, at the time, he meant what he said."

Judith is a successful business owner in Michigan, as well as a volunteer for various organizations. She has dedicated her life to giving support, comfort, and inspiration to the people she welcomes into her business' "family," and is committed to making their dreams come true.

"He wanted to isolate me."

The strength that Judith draws from so that she may give support to others was not always within her. "There were times when I had given up hope on all life," Judith says, "and I know it was my prayers and the prayers of my family that brought me through what I went through."

For 15 years, Judith endured repeated abuse from her husband. "The second year of our marriage is when it all started...when I recognized it." He wanted her home at all times, he did not want her to better herself, and wanted her at his "beck and call." He would come to her job site and make threats.

This is one person's story of survival. What is safe for one person may not be safe for another. You know your situation the best.

---

He would not allow her to have friends. "He wanted to isolate me. He would tell me how ugly I was, that I was nothing, that 'no one wants you. I don't want you.' And when this is coming from someone you think loves you... you begin to think and feel that they must be right. Verbal abuse destroys your self-esteem and self-worth."

LEAVING AND GOING BACK

There were no domestic violence shelters or 24-hour help lines during the time when Judith was living with domestic abuse. She had left her husband several times and returned with the hopes that she could make things work. He was the father of her children and she wanted a family as she had always envisioned. But each time it was harder to leave, and each time the abuse would get worse. Judith became increasingly concerned about the effect that this would have on her children. She did not want them to become abusers, or to think that this is how women are supposed to be treated. She knew she had to get out. "I could not subject my children to it any longer. I would not. I am their protector."

MAKING THAT DECISION

The longer you are in a relationship with someone, the more you accumulate together. The children are attached to both parents, which also makes it difficult to leave. Judith got to the point where the house she owned with her husband meant nothing to her. Others have said similar things to her about jointly owned houses, cars, and furniture. "You've got to come to the realization that...it's just a house. My peace of mind is worth more to me than anything. My children's lives are more important to me. I cannot sleep in peace. I cannot be in peace. I've got to get out of this relationship. I cannot stay here. And that's what I did."

"My peace of mind is worth more to me than anything."

After the last beating, Judith's husband dropped her off at the emergency room with broken ribs and a number of other injuries. They asked her if she wanted to press charges, and she said "No." She knew her husband had a gun and "...knew the man was serious about what he was talking about doing to me." So she began to look for a new place for her and her children to live. "I was serious about it" she says, "I had had it."

PREPARING TO LEAVE

This time, Judith prepared herself for leaving. "When I would buy groceries, I would buy enough groceries for my other place. I would buy bed linens...I would put food in someone else's freezer." She made certain that she and her children would have supplies for six months after leaving. Judith decided that the best course of action for her was to be direct and honest with her husband about her plans to leave. She still wanted her children to have a relationship with their father. "I had nothing to hide from him—he knew I was serious about this. I told myself, I can do this. I will do this. And I did it!"

A NEW LIFE

When asked if she felt safe at her new place, Judith said "...not in the very beginning. But I had peace of mind. I was able to sleep nights. That just improved as days went on." Her husband tried to talk her into coming back, but she would not go back to that situation. She counted on herself to keep her family safe and her faith to sustain them.

She reflected on something her father used to say to her and her sisters when they were dating, "If it's bad enough to leave, it's too bad to go back to it." That would be her advice to others who find themselves in abusive relationships. "If you're in a situation where you're being abused—it's not going to get any better without help. It's just going to get worse. Get out of it. Don't ever go back to it, because if they did it once, they will do it again."

EVERY SITUATION IS DIFFERENT

Judith is sharing her story, with the hope that others will find comfort, and realize that "...it is an individual decision they will have to make for themselves. I think when we have different examples or situations, we can then determine which is the best course for me to take. Women need to know...that any type of abuse is serious...these types of people are insecure...they are controllers...that's what it's all about—control. Don't give in to that control." Judith stresses that everyone's situation is different and you have to know your own. When asked if there was anything that could have assisted her during the time she was being abused or as she prepared to leave, Judith admits that support from her family would have been helpful. She believes she would have sought help from groups or crisis shelters, if they had been available for her—that she would have picked up the phone and called a help line.

"I told myself I can do this."

EVERY DAY IS A GIFT

Now, Judith's main joy in life is to help others. "If there is a way to give back, I am there to do just that," she says. "Every day is a gift. Each day, I want to open the gift to see what's in it. Every day is a gift."

If Your Abuser Comes to Your Work

Spouses or domestic partners were responsible for 160 workplace homicides from 2011-2015<sup>1</sup>

Domestic violence can afflict victims at work in many ways, such as threatening phone calls or unexpected visits from the abuser, as well as actual incidents of violence. It is well known that violence often increases when the victim leaves or attempts to leave the relationship. The workplace can then become the easiest place to locate and gain access to the victim.

Employees who are coping with domestic violence have reported that it has a negative impact on their job performance. The American Institute of Domestic Violence found that with such employees, 96% experience problems at work due to abuse, 74% are harassed while at work by their abuser, 56% are late to work, 28% leave work early, and 54% miss entire days of work.

Consider Talking to Your Employer

It is understandable that you may not want your employer or coworkers to know you are being abused. However, only when your employer knows of the potential danger you may be in can steps be taken to increase your safety while you are at work.

Employers should consider working closely with the victim, security, and local law enforcement to help create a safer environment and be able to respond quickly if a violent incident or threat occurs.

For professional assistance or to implement an Employee Assistance Program (EAP) at your workplace, employers and employees can contact:

United States Attorneys

A personal protection order, or PPO, is an order issued by the Circuit Court. It can help to protect you from being abused, threatened, or stalked by another person.

What Can a PPO Do?

- The PPO may prohibit someone from coming into your home or harassing you at work. Even if a survivor has left their abuser, the work site is one place where the abuser can find them.
- The PPO can prohibit them from buying a firearm or finding your address through school records.
- The PPO can also prohibit them from taking your minor children unless required by the court.
- There is no cost to file a PPO.

Who Can Get a PPO?

Anyone who has been physically or sexually abused or threatened by someone they have been married to, lived with, dated, or have a child with, can get a PPO.

Some examples may include:

- a current or former spouse, family member, partner, other parent of your child, or current or former person you have dated.
- anyone who has been stalked.

How Do I Get a PPO?

You file for a PPO with the Circuit Court Clerk's office in your county. PPO standards are the same, but practices may vary by county. It may be helpful to contact your local domestic violence program for help with this process.

What Should I Bring?

- A statement telling the court what has been going on. Make sure to list everything including dates and details the best you can. NOTE: Inaccuracies can harm your case and be used against you. The abuser will be able to read this statement.
- Police reports, medical records, photographs, or witnesses;
- Information about the abuser: current address, date of birth or age, hair color, eye color, height, weight, address, Social Security number, driver's license number;
- Any court papers you have. For example, custody and/or parenting time orders, lease agreement, divorce papers, or criminal case records.

CARRY A COPY OF
YOUR PPO WITH YOU AT ALL TIMES.

*This will help police
enforce the PPO if there is a violation.*

Cyberstalking, High-Tech Harassment, and the Crime of Stalking USING TECHNOLOGY TO PURSUE, HARASS OR STALK.

For more information and ways to protect yourself, visit:

(NATIONAL NETWORK TO END DOMESTIC VIOLENCE)

Information on Michigan's Stalking Laws can be found on page 13.

Cyberstalking and High-Tech Harassment

Potential stalkers may find it easier to stalk via a remote device rather than confront their victim face to face.

Stalkers and abusers can easily use a variety of electronic devices and computer applications, including cell phones, to pursue, harass and stalk their victim. This form of stalking is often referred to as cyberstalking.

A cyberstalker repeatedly uses the internet to harass their victim through social networking sites, emails and/or text messages. The cyberstalker may also acquire or impersonate the victim's identity and invite third parties to further their stalking behaviors, also known as trolling. A victim can feel overwhelmed, fearful, and intimidated, even though the stalking is not a physical presence.

Take cyberstalking seriously. To help establish a record of stalking incidents and behaviors, document your experiences and save menacing or harassing messages and emails.

Cyberstalking can escalate to physical contact or coming to your home or workplace.

Be Aware

- GPS tracking devices can be hidden on vehicles and in belongings.

- Location tracking is enabled on modern cell phones and an abuser may be able to view it. They may also be able to view recently used maps on a phone or a computer the phone's data has been synced with.
- Many cell phone cameras come enabled with geo-tagging features. This means that latitude and longitude location data is embedded in all photos taken with such cell phones. Learn how to turn this option off.

Keep In Mind

- If you are arranging escape plans, USE A DONATED OR NEW CELL PHONE. Do not use a shared or family cell phone since billing records and phone logs might reveal your plans. Your local crisis shelter may be able to provide you with a safe cell phone or prepaid phone cards.
- Be sure devices such as baby monitors and speaker phones are turned off during sensitive conversations.
- Many courts and government agencies are putting records online. Request that access to your personal information be restricted.

Computer and Mobile Device Safety

Computer and mobile devices can be monitored by an abuser or anyone else who knows how to access them directly or remotely. Online activities and searches are stored within the devices and are impossible to completely erase.

Computers and mobile devices, especially when used on the internet, automatically store a virtual trail of activity and searches, such as what websites have been visited and what has been posted online.

There are precautions you can take when using computers and mobile devices:

- If you think your computer or device is being monitored by someone, don't suddenly stop using it. This may raise suspicion. Continue to use it for nonpersonal activities such as looking up the weather.
- Consider creating a new email account from a safe computer like at a library or a trusted friend's house. Do not check this new email account from the computer or device you think is being monitored.
- Email addresses should not contain your real name. Do not share detailed information about yourself.
- If a computer or device app asks if you would like it to remember your password – choose "No."

It may be safer to use a computer at a library or trusted friend's house.

- Learn about the Preferences settings of the computer and mobile device apps you use, especially for web browsers.
- All major internet browsers have the option to use a "private browsing" or "incognito mode." When browsing the internet in a private mode, data such as the history of websites you have visited, passwords, and cookies will not be stored.
- Uncheck the "Use Inline Auto-complete" box. This function will automatically complete an internet address when you start typing in the internet address box. This could give hints to which websites you have visited.
- Do not use the same password for different accounts. Each email or online account you create should have a different password. Passwords should contain both letters and numbers and be at least 8-10 characters long. Do not use passwords that can be easily guessed such as family names or important dates.

Be Cautious With Your Personal Information Settings on Social Media Sites

- Set your pages on Facebook, Instagram, Twitter and other social media sites to "private" and "friends only." CAUTION: This will not guarantee that your information is completely private.
- Limit the amount of personal information you include in your public profile or "bio."
- Consider reporting any harassment on social media from your abuser to the social media or website company. If it violates the site's terms of service or content guidelines, they may remove the content. Be sure to document or take screenshots of the abuse first if you want evidence of it.
- Be aware that messages and photos you post on your page and your friends' pages can be viewed by others.
Discuss with friends and family what type of information may not be safe for them to post about you.

Documentation Tips for Survivors

Abusers often misuse technology to further abuse and control their victims. Documenting all incidents can be helpful if you ever decide to pursue legal action. It may not be safe to use your mobile device to collect evidence. Trust your instincts and do what is safest for you.

- Emails. Save threatening or harassing emails – if safe to do so – but do not forward the emails to someone else. Emails contain IP addresses which can be used to identify the sender. (Forwarded emails lose the identifying information needed for evidence.) If you're concerned someone could access your email account, try to print them out or take screenshots of the content including the headers.
- Text Messages. Take screenshots or pictures of text messages. Also take a screenshot of the abuser's contact page to show that the harassing messages are associated with their phone number. Text message content is only kept by wireless carriers for a limited time. If you are working with law enforcement, ask them to send a preservation letter to the phone company so the data is not deleted.
- Harassing Phone Calls. Consider recording your phone conversations. Michigan law allows for recording as long as you are personally a part of the conversation. Document your call logs by taking a screenshot or picture of the call list including dates and times.
- Outside Help. Consider asking a trusted friend, coworker or family member to help. They can make note of the times your partner calls you at work or a friend can keep your journal at their house.

The Crime of Stalking

In 2017, the Michigan State Police reported 16,813 victims of the crime of Intimidation/Stalking.

Stalking is repeated harassment that makes you feel scared or threatened.

Stalking can be directly related to domestic violence, or can involve complete strangers.

If you feel you are being repeatedly harassed, frightened, intimidated, threatened, or terrorized by another individual, you may be a victim of stalking. All forms of stalking, whether by a stranger, or domestic-violence related, can escalate over time and should be considered dangerous and unpredictable.

Call 9-1-1 if you feel you are in immediate danger.

Stalkers may embark on long-term, calculated “campaigns” of harassment that threaten the safety and livelihood of their targets and the target’s family, workplace, and property.

In the United States between 2009-2010, approximately 5.2 million women and 1.4 million men reported being stalked.<sup>1</sup> Stalking victimization is receiving greater recognition as a problem affecting both men and women. Much of what has been learned is based on studies of intimate partner violence and special populations such as college students.

One common misconception is that there is, or has been, a relationship between the stalker and the victim. This is not always the case. Oftentimes, the offender develops a fantasy-based, one-way relationship after only a casual introduction, and begins to stalk the victim. This can be very confusing for the victim, while the offender sees it as a “loving,” two-way relationship.

Contact local law enforcement and document all incidents whether you plan to file formal charges or not.

1 in 6 women and 1 in 19 men have experienced stalking in their lifetimes.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Ibid.

Examples of Stalking Behavior

Repeated, unwanted and intimidating course of conduct such as:

- following or confronting you or appearing within your sight;
- appearing at your workplace or your home;
- entering or remaining on your property;
- leaving an object like a “gift” of any kind on your property;
- contacting you by phone, letters, text messages, emails or social media;
- threatening you with harm or death;
- finding out about you through your garbage, public records, online searches; or contacting family, friends, neighbors or co-workers;
- any other behavior or action that threatens, controls, or tracks you.

Precautions

- ✓ Always trust your instincts. If you feel afraid, don’t ignore it.
- ✓ Obtain a new, unlisted phone number. Have the number blocked and screen calls with voice mail or an answering machine.
- ✓ Vary the times and routes you take to work or frequently visited places.
- ✓ Avoid wearing headphones or earbuds when outside. Be aware of your surroundings at all times.
- ✓ Travel with friends, limit time spent alone and try to stay in public areas.
- ✓ Consider a stalking PPO (see page 21).

“I didn’t know where he was; therefore, he was everywhere.”

Stalking can leave lasting emotional scars. Many people who have been stalked express, “You can’t let fear stop you from living your life ... you have to continue to move forward and refuse to hide.” Law enforcement can help, as well as support from family, friends, and professional advocates and resources.

No one deserves to live in fear.

Collecting Evidence

- ✓ Document the stalker’s activities in a journal; include details and record as soon as possible after each incident.
- ✓ Save any phone or text messages, letters, emails, or gifts from the stalker.
- ✓ Videotape or photograph the stalker’s activities if safe and possible.
- ✓ Collect any identifying information about the stalker such as personal appearance, type of car, license plate number, address if known, and other identifying characteristics.

Please see “Documentation Tips for Survivors” on page 25.

Is it Time to Leave?

Only you know when, and if, you should leave.

Trust your instincts – you know what is best for your situation.

Whether or not to leave an abusive relationship is a very complex and personal decision. There are many things to consider. You, however, are the only one who can make that choice. Know that you are not alone and there are people trained to help you when you are ready.

If you feel you can do it safely, call a domestic violence program in your area or 24-hour crisis helpline. They can help you develop a safety plan.

Domestic violence programs also offer services such as housing assistance, counseling, helping you obtain a personal protection order, and providing information related to your legal options.

It is important to know the violence may get worse when you show signs of independence or try to leave.

THIS CAN BE A VERY DANGEROUS TIME.

Call your local domestic violence resource for all of your options.

Plan and Prepare

If you are considering leaving your abusive relationship, careful planning may increase your safety.

THINK ABOUT

- Have a bag packed. Keep it hidden, but accessible, in case you need it quickly. (For some ideas of items to pack, see the list below.)
- Identify safer rooms in your home where there are less potential weapons. Practice how to get out of your home quickly and safely.
- Identify a trusted neighbor you can tell about the abuse. Ask that they call the police if they hear you being assaulted.
- Open a savings account in your name only to have a secure place to save money for yourself.
- If you have pets, do you feel you could leave them behind? If not, research places you can go with your pets. (See Domestic Violence Survivors and Their Pets on page 32.)
- Contact your local domestic violence program, shelter, or rape crisis center to learn about free 9-1-1 cell phones.
- Memorize your local domestic violence program's phone number.

Always call 9-1-1 if you are in immediate danger.

ITEMS TO CONSIDER PACKING:

- Money (cash)
- Spare keys to car, house, and work
- Checkbooks, credit cards
- Extra clothes
- Medications
- PPO, divorce papers, custody orders, insurance papers
- Driver's license, car registration
- Birth certificates
- Social security cards
- School and medical records
- Lease/rental agreement
- Social service I.D. cards and medical I.D. cards
- Passports, green cards, work permits
- Bill payments and any unpaid bills
- Baby items, small toys for your children, pet food
- Pictures, jewelry, things that mean a lot to you
- Online account numbers and passwords
- Anything that can provide evidence of abuse

Should I Take My Children With Me When I Leave?

Yes, if you feel you can do it safely, take your children with you. It is often more difficult to get them back later. You know your situation best. Follow your intuition as to whether or not it is safe to take your children when you leave.

Consider talking with an advocate from your local domestic violence program. Together you can discuss your individual situation and the options relating to your children. Ask what the current laws are if you plan to move your children out of state.

Your spouse or partner may try to kidnap, threaten, or harm the children in order to get you to return. Notify those in contact with your children, such as schools or day care providers, regarding who has permission to pick them up.

Where Can I Go?

- Stay with a trusted friend or relative, but keep in mind your abuser may know where to find you. Be selective when telling friends and family of your new location and ask them not to share this with others.
- A domestic violence shelter. The program staff can help you with legal and financial issues as well as provide emotional support.
- You can call 9-1-1 if you are in immediate danger and need help finding local resources.

See the Local Resource guide at the back of this booklet for help locating a domestic violence program in your area.

Your Local Domestic Violence Program Can:

- provide safe, short-term housing;
- provide food and clothing;
- give you time to consider future options;
- help you make a plan and prioritize your needs;
- provide crisis intervention, social service and program referrals;
- help with financial assistance and legal resources;
- supply employment assistance;
- provide support and counseling services.

After Leaving

Consider obtaining a P.O. Box and forwarding all of your mail to it.

You may want to call your utility companies, wireless phone service and financial institutions to ensure they do not give out your private financial information to your abuser. Be sure to do the same on all new accounts. Ask these companies to use identifiers other than your social security number, date of birth or mother's maiden name to validate your identity.

Think of a safe way to communicate with your abuser, if this becomes necessary. If you agree to meet, always do so in a public place (preferably a place with a security guard or police officer). If your abuser follows you after meeting, seek out a safe place like a hospital, police or fire station for assistance.

Consider creating a safety plan at work. Talk with your supervisor and building security. It is helpful to provide a picture of your abuser and a copy of your PPO, if you have one.

You may want to keep a record of anything that happens between you and your abuser, and anything regarding your children and visitation.

It's a good idea to change ATM, debit, and credit card PIN codes; online banking, investing, and email passwords. (See "Computer and Mobile Device Safety" on page 24 for tips on creating a secure password.)

Think about making changes to your beneficiary designations.

Domestic Violence Survivors and Their Pets

When trying to escape domestic violence, many survivors worry about the safety of their pets if they are left with an abusive partner.

Abusers often threaten, abuse, or kill pets as a way to further intimidate and control their partner. Domestic violence shelters reported nationally that 85% of women coming to their facilities told of incidents of pet abuse.

Many survivors will either stay longer in an abusive relationship, or return to an abuser out of fear for their animal's welfare. Not all domestic violence shelters have facilities to accommodate pets. This can further complicate plans to leave an abusive relationship.

An increasing number of domestic violence shelters are now allowing survivors to bring their pets. Shelters that can't accommodate pets may be able to help locate a shelter that does, or find temporary sheltering services. If you are working with a domestic violence shelter, Safe Escape grants may be able to help with the costs of boarding your pet.

Keep pets in mind if you are planning to leave, and pack pet food, ID tags, vaccination records, as well as, any paperwork or vet bills that may be in your name. This can be helpful in case your abusive partner tries to claim ownership of your pet.

The following agencies allow you to search for pet shelter services by state:

- DomesticShelters.org
- Safe Place for Pets by RedRover
- The Humane Society's Directory for Safe Havens for Animals

A growing awareness of the connection between domestic violence and animal abuse has prompted states to add increased protections for pets. In Michigan, and in 31 other states, domestic violence personal protection orders can include pets if there is intent to cause mental distress or to exert control over a victim with respect to an animal in which the victim has an ownership interest.

For a listing of Michigan domestic violence shelters that offer pet services, see pages 75-76.

Domestic violence programs help break down the isolation barrier for those who have experienced abusive relationships.

Many find understanding and empathy from other survivors that can turn into strong friendships and support networks.

Multi-Lingual Assistance

PART 3

TEEN DATING VIOLENCE
TEEN DATING VIOLENCE

Ask Yourself

TEEN DATING VIOLENCE

To help yourself and others, it is important to be informed about dating violence and be able to recognize signs of abuse.

What is Dating Violence?

Dating violence is a pattern of assaultive and controlling behaviors that one person uses against another in order to gain or maintain power in a dating relationship.

The abuser intentionally behaves in ways that cause fear, degradation and humiliation to control the other person. Forms of abuse can be physical, sexual, emotional and psychological.

Abuse occurs in a dating relationship because the abuser has a sense of entitlement – they believe they have the right to behave this way. They believe they are entitled to all of their partner’s attention, affection, loyalty and time.

It is the goal of the abuser to get and keep power and control over their partner. They intentionally use manipulative and controlling behaviors to keep this power and control. It is the abuser’s choice to engage in this type of behavior.

Studies generally have found that when teenagers are being hurt in dating relationships, they rarely seek the help of a teacher, police officer, or counselor. Often, their abuser is using controlling behaviors to make them feel they are to blame. Victims may think that reporting a problem would get them into more trouble. Most often, if they choose to tell anyone, that person will be a friend or peer.

Does Your Partner...

- ... try to control what you do, where you go, or who you see?
- ... check your phone all the time?
- ... tell you what to wear or how to look?
- ... put you down in front of your friends?
- ... text you excessively?
- ... not listen to your opinion?
- ... not let you go anywhere by yourself?
- ... take money from you?
- ... keep you from seeing friends or doing things you used to enjoy and look forward to?
- ... not give you any time alone, even with family?
- ... threaten you if you try to end the relationship?
- ... act jealous or angry when you can't be found?
- ... say things like “If you loved me, you would do what I say”?
- ... tell you no one else could ever love you?

Ask yourself, how does your partner treat you?

A dating relationship should be non-controlling and non-manipulative. It’s about respecting and trusting each other.

At the beginning stages of the dating relationship, these behaviors may not be apparent or may be so subtle they are mistaken for the abuser’s caring, concern, or love. As the relationship becomes more involved, the abuser may gradually escalate the use of these behaviors.

By the time most domestic abusers reach young adulthood, their patterns of abuse in intimate relationships can already be firmly established.

Answers to Myths About Teen Dating Violence

1. FALSE. Data shows that intimate partner violence often begins in adolescence. Among U.S. students in the 9th-12th grades who reported dating, 10% had experienced physical dating violence in the past 12 months.<sup>1</sup>

2. FALSE. Dating violence is a pattern of assaultive and controlling behaviors that one person uses against another in order to gain or maintain power in the relationship. The abuser intentionally behaves in ways that cause fear, degradation and humiliation to control the other person. Forms of abuse can be physical, sexual, emotional and psychological.

25% - 33% of teen abusers reported that their use of violence served to "intimidate," "frighten," or "force the other person to give me something."<sup>2</sup>

3. TRUE. Young women between the ages of 16 and 24 are the most vulnerable to intimate partner violence.<sup>3</sup>

4. FALSE. One of the main causes of dating violence is the abuser making the choice to engage in this behavior. Alcohol or drug use is often an excuse used to justify the abuser's violent actions.

5. FALSE. The person using abusive behavior is the one responsible for the abuse. It is difficult for teens to leave abusive relationships for various reasons. The fear of the abuser's threats is usually the number one reason along with lack of social support, or fear that nothing will happen to the abuser.

6. FALSE. Abusers make decisions about when they will abuse, how frequently they will abuse, what the severity will be, and where the abuse will take place. This decision-making process has nothing to do with the teen victim's demeanor or behavior.

7. FALSE. If the police believe that an assault has occurred (based on the individual's statements, possible witnesses, demeanor of one or both parties, any property destruction, etc.) they can make a warrantless arrest of the abuser. The victim does not have to press charges against the abuser. The prosecutor, not the victim, has sole responsibility for deciding whether or not to press charges against the abuser (see flowchart on page 15).

Both males and females, as well as individuals in same-sex relationships, can be affected by dating violence.

Sexual Coercion

Sexual coercion is the act of using pressure, alcohol or drugs, or physical force to have sexual contact with someone against his or her will.

Pressure comes in a lot of different forms and can affect many areas of your life. You can feel pressure from friends, homework and teachers, family life, competitive activities like sports, or just coping with the day-to-day drama at school.

One place you should not feel pressure is in your dating relationship and how far you want to take it with your significant other. That is one aspect of your life you always have control over.

Setting boundaries is an important part of any relationship, so both people can feel they are starting from the same point. You should feel comfortable enough with your partner to honestly express your feelings – and they should express theirs in return. If your partner’s response is to get angry, impatient, or to “blow off” what you’re telling them, they are not showing you the respect you deserve.

*You don't DWE
your partner anything.*

Getting physical with your partner doesn’t have to happen all at once if you’re not ready. There isn’t a “rule book” that says what has to happen in a relationship, or at what point. Trust your instincts and take it at your own pace.

You can think of sexual coercion as a spectrum of behaviors that can range from merely irritating to more intense or even dangerous conduct.

If your dating partner uses any of the following to get you to be more physical than you want, he or she may be using sexual coercion:

*repeatedly asking you
to go beyond your boundaries*

*physically touching you
in ways you’ve expressed you don’t want*

“guilt-tripping” you when you don’t do what they want

*sending you naked photos –
or asking you to send naked photos of yourself*

lying to you or making threats

yelling at you or calling you names

repeatedly using phrases like “Come on, I love you, just one more kiss”

*holding you down;
continuing to touch you and not stopping*

Be clear and direct with your partner and don’t be embarrassed if you don’t want to do something. You absolutely don’t have to do anything you don’t want to. If they are not listening to you – try to leave the situation.

Sexting

? *Does someone ask you
to send naked or “dirty”
pictures of yourself?*

You can never guarantee that private photos won’t end up online or on someone else’s phone. The same goes for webcams, texts and videos.

Once you hit “Send” you lose control over who sees it.

THINK TWICE BEFORE SENDING PHOTOS OF YOURSELF.

? *Have you received sexual text messages, pictures,
or videos that make you
feel uncomfortable?*

This can be a type of sexual bullying and used to intimidate or harass you. If your dating partner sends you explicit messages, it could be a form of abusive behavior. Nude photos or videos of anyone under 18 years old could be considered child pornography and is illegal.

SEXTING CAN HAVE LEGAL CONSEQUENCES.

What You Can Do:

- Tell your parents or a trusted adult for help and guidance.
- Don’t respond to hostile, harassing, or inappropriate texts or messages. The same goes for webcams and instant messages. Responding may only encourage the person sending the messages.
- Block harassing numbers from texting or calling you. (Contact your phone company for more information.)
- Don’t answer calls from unknown or blocked numbers.
- Save or document harassing messages in case you need them later. Consider all threatening texts to be serious.
- If the harassment continues, you may consider filing a criminal report and asking for a personal protection order. (See page 21 for more information.)

Sexual Bullying

A sexual type of bullying is known as sexual bullying. It can also be sexual harassment.

Sexual bullying is physical or non-physical behavior that is based on a person's sexuality or gender. It can be done to a person's face, behind their back, or through electronic media.

Does someone make you feel uncomfortable, intimidated or small by saying sexual things to you or about you? Has someone spread gossip or rumors of a sexual nature about you? If they have, this is sexual bullying. Sometimes sexual harassment or bullying can get physical, too.

Each situation is unique, but if this is happening to you, or if you see it happen to someone else —

DON'T WAIT – SPEAK UP – SAY IT'S NOT OKAY, and talk to a trusted adult.

THERE'S NO SUCH THING AS "ASKING FOR IT."

Speak up against bullying of all kinds.

Below are some common types of sexual bullying or harassment:

- Showing someone inappropriate or "dirty" sexual videos and/or pictures;
- Spreading sexual rumors (in person, by text, or online);
- Making sexual jokes, comments, or gestures;
- Writing sexual messages in public about other people;
- Posting sexual comments, pictures, or videos on social networks like Facebook and Twitter;
- Making sexual comments or offers online while pretending to be someone else;
- Touching, grabbing, or pinching someone in a deliberate sexual way;
- Pulling at someone's clothing and brushing up against them in a purposefully sexual way.

Ask Yourself

Has my dating partner ever:

- kept me from seeing friends and family?
- insulted or humiliated me in front of others?
- demanded to know where I am at all times?
- texted me excessively?
- checked my phone for calls and texts?
- tried to control where I go or who I hang out with?
- taken money from me?
- told me how to dress?
- acted extremely jealous for no reason?
- been cruel to pets or other animals?
- been abusive to former dating partners?
- acted physically abusive toward me like punching, slapping, shoving, or kicking?
- threatened to hurt me or my friends or family?
- forced me to have sex or perform sexual acts I didn't want to?
- abandoned me in a dangerous situation or unfamiliar area?
- displayed extreme mood swings – very happy one moment and very angry the next?
- threatened suicide?
- kept me from doing things I like?

"How Am I Being Treated?"

Dating violence can be physical, sexual, verbal, or emotional abuse.

Ask Yourself

Do you feel like:

- you are constantly worrying about keeping your partner happy; that if you "just try harder" everything will be okay?
- you often apologize or make excuses for your partner's behavior, especially after they have treated you badly?
- you are fearful of breaking up with your partner because they have threatened to hurt you or themselves?
- you are being stalked?
- your relationship developed very quickly and there was pressure to commit?
- you are blamed for all of the problems and arguments?
- you are "tied down" and always have to check in with your partner?
- you can't bring up certain subjects or make decisions because it may make your partner angry?

(For more information on stalking, see pages 22-27.)

How to Help a Friend Who is Being Abused

LISTEN.

Give your undivided attention and listen attentively without interrupting.

GIVE THEM CONTROL.

It is important your friend have control over the conversation and can speak freely and openly. All control has been stripped from her or him during the abuse so it is important that you allow them to make decisions such as who to tell and what steps to take next. You can encourage your friend to seek medical attention or counseling, but it is important that you don't try to force her or him to do anything— unless you know they are in immediate danger. If your friend is in immediate danger, call 9-1-1.

UNDERSTAND.

Try to understand their thoughts, feelings and experiences from their point of view.

DON'T JUDGE.

Do not make judgments about their situation or the decisions your friend has made or will make. Offer your support and assistance.

BELIEVE.

Believe what your friend tells you. It takes strength and courage to reach out.

BE SUPPORTIVE.

Tell your friend it is not their fault. Don't minimize or make excuses for the abusive behavior. It is common for survivors to feel they have done something wrong. Remind your friend the abuser chose to abuse.

RESPECT THEIR DECISION.

Sometimes we think we know what is best; however, telling your friend what to do will NOT be helpful. Respect their decision to leave or to stay in the relationship.

Only they can know what is best for them.

CONFIDENTIALITY.

Your friend has chosen to confide in you. It's not your place to tell others – with the exception of informing a teacher, counselor, or another trusted adult if your friend is in immediate danger.

Don't contact their abuser or publicly post negative things about them. It may only worsen the situation for your friend.

SAFETY PLAN.

Help your friend develop a safety plan, whether it's using code words or signals, or finding him or her a place to stay.

EDUCATE YOURSELF.

Understand the dynamics of dating violence and what resources are available. For more information, visit www.michigan.gov/datingviolence.

BE RESOURCEFUL.

Offer the phone number or website of the local domestic violence program in your area. The National Teen Dating Abuse Helpline is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, at 1-866-331-9474. You or your friend can text or live chat with a peer advocate anytime or visit www.loveisrespect.org.

YOUR FRIEND IS BEING ABUSIVE... ...WHAT CAN YOU DO?

Don't Let It Go.

Confronting a friend and calling them out on their abusive behavior is not an easy thing to do. But ignoring it or making excuses only reinforces what they're doing is okay. It can send a strong message to the victim that no one else thinks anything is wrong with how they're being treated. The victim may become isolated and less likely to escape the abuse.

Give Examples of Abuse You Have Witnessed.

Give examples to your friend on how they've been abusive. Try to focus on the harm you saw being done to their partner and how the situation made you feel.

Keep the Focus on the Abuser's Choice of Behavior.

Your abusive friend may try to turn the conversation into a discussion of their partner's faults. Remind them we choose how to react and behave; and their partner doesn't have to change in order to make the abuse stop.

It's Okay to End the Relationship.

Tell your friend it's okay to respectfully end the relationship if it's not working out. You don't want them to get into trouble and dating abuse is serious. Offer professional resources they could contact (many are listed in the back of this booklet).

For Parents and Guardians

Although it's most often a male battering a female, dating violence can occur in any relationship and either gender can be the abuser.

As a parent or guardian, it is often a difficult task to talk with your child about complex and sensitive issues. Any child today can find themselves coping with situations such as dating violence, sexting, sexual bullying, sexual assault, and even stalking behaviors. It's important to keep your child safe without alienating them from friends and normal activities.

Young people tend to interpret the violence of their partner as signifying love.<sup>1</sup>

Signs that your child may be experiencing abuse in a dating relationship:

- Your child's partner is extremely jealous or possessive;
- You notice unexplained bruises or marks on your child;
- Your child's partner emails or texts excessively;
- Your child answers emails or texts constantly and feels anxious or upset if unable to reply;
- You notice your child is depressed, withdrawn, nervous, or anxious;
- Your child stops participating in extracurricular activities, social events, or hobbies;
- Your child stops spending time with family and friends;
- You notice disturbing or drastic changes in your child's tone, language use, or style of clothing.

Try to reach out and connect.

- Remind your child that everyone deserves a safe and healthy relationship and abuse should never be tolerated.
- Teach your child about setting boundaries with their partners.
- Be supportive and understanding even though what they might be telling you is difficult to hear or comprehend.
- Stress that being abused or sexually assaulted is not their fault and you don't blame them.
- Take them seriously and validate their feelings without minimizing what they're telling you.

- Gain their trust by listening without getting angry.
- Don't blame the other parents by telling your child "I told you they were bad news" or "not a good family."
- Don't put yourself against your child's abusive partner or their parents or guardians – it may not be safe.
- Be open-minded to what your child shares with you.

Professional assistance may help.

CONSIDER:

- Informing school officials and verifying school policies;
- Obtaining a personal protection order or a restraining order;
- Reaching out to community parent support groups;
- Offering access to youth support groups and age-appropriate information and resources.

Make a plan together.

Help your child develop a safety plan.

Once your child decides to leave the abusive relationship, this can be a very dangerous time. The ex-partner can become enraged, obsessive, volatile, persistent, tenacious and it's possible that stalking behaviors can begin.

In the end, you and your child should come to an agreement on the course of action to be taken. Staff at your local domestic violence program can help with safety planning. Many of the resources listed in this booklet can also offer support and guidance.

For Today's Young Men and Women

One in three adolescents in the U.S. is a victim of physical, sexual, emotional or verbal abuse from a dating partner.<sup>1</sup>

- Take steps to safely and effectively intervene
- Speak up against sexist language
- Speak up against behaviors that promote violence
- If safe to do so, help to stop behavior that puts others at risk
- Provide peer leadership in social groups

Being an active bystander can help protect against violence.

Stop the Silence. Help End the Violence.

OK2SAY encourages confidential tips on criminal activities or potential harm directed at students, school employees, or schools.

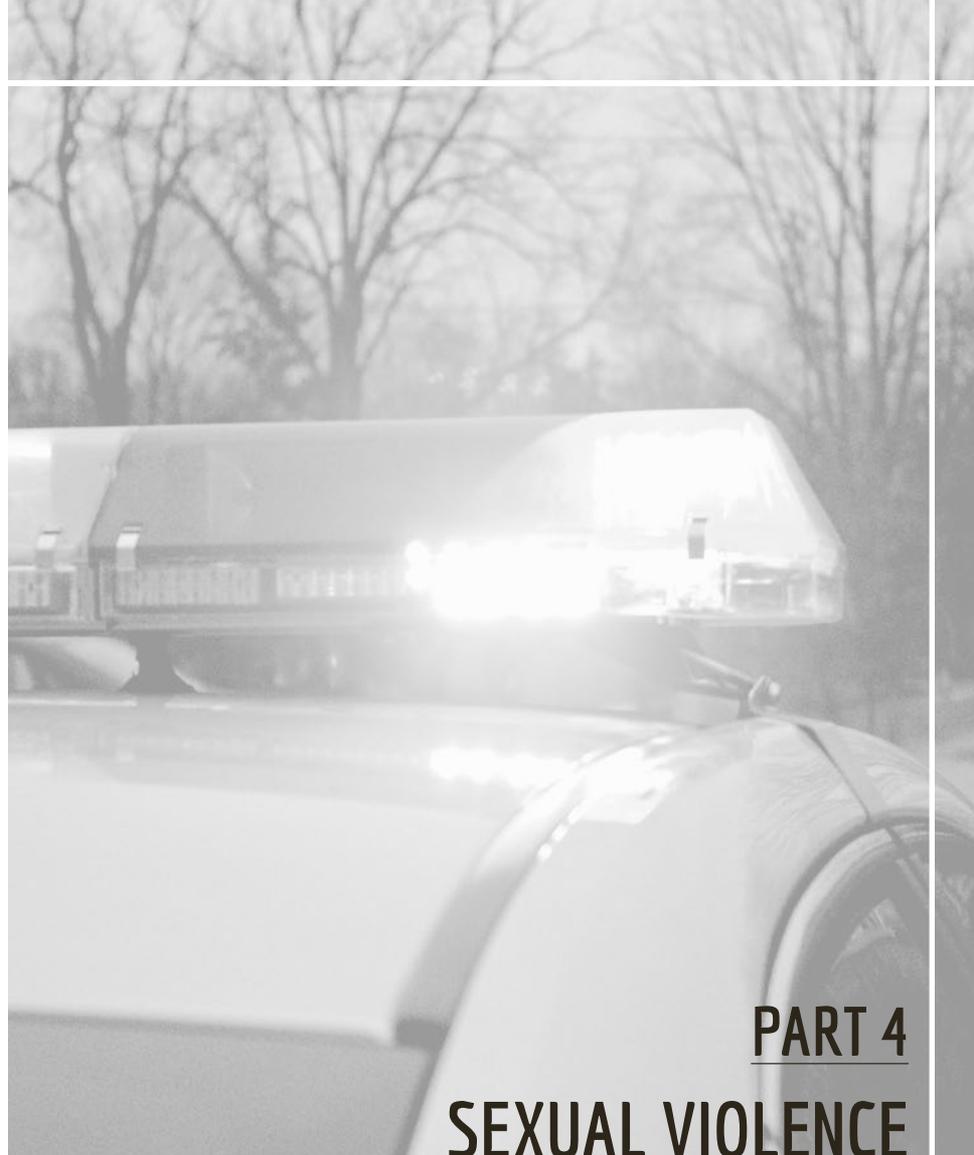

- Recognize and say "NO" to hurtful behavior
- Trust your instincts
- Don't be pressured to change who you are to please your partner
- Know you have control over your own body
- Pursue your own interests
- Know that you can break up and fall out of love without fear

SEXUAL VIOLENCE
SEXUAL VIOLENCE

Ask Yourself

SEXUAL VIOLENCE

Criminal Sexual Conduct

Sexual assault is any form of sexual contact that a victim has not initiated or agreed to, and which is imposed by using violence, threats, coercion, or deception. Michigan courts refer to these offenses as "criminal sexual conduct."

1 in 5 women
and 1 in 59 men in the United States is raped in their lifetime.<sup>1</sup>

Sexual assault is not based on sex, love or physical attraction. It is a crime of power and control. Offenders choose people whom they perceive as most vulnerable, accessible, or over whom they believe they can assert power.

Examples of When Rape May Have Occurred...

... from the victim's perspective:	... from the offender's perspective:
"It went too far."	"I was totally teased; it wasn't my fault."
"I said 'No' but he wouldn't stop."	"She was dressed so sexy, I knew what she wanted."
"It was such a bad neighborhood, I didn't dare get out of the car."	"I could tell 'No' meant 'Yes.'"
"He said it was impossible for him to stop once he was aroused."	"We'd had sex before, so what was so different this time?"
"I changed my mind, but she wouldn't let go."
"He was so much stronger than me. I was afraid to make him mad."

If you have been sexually assaulted, you can call the National Sexual Assault Hotline at 1-800-656-4673. They can connect you to a sexual assault resource in your area.

See page 54 for information on the SAFE Response (Sexual Assault Forensic Exam) program.

If You Have Been Raped

Don't blame yourself. The rapist is to blame. Now is the time to take care of yourself.

1 Get to a safe place. It's most important after a sexual assault to get to a place of safety, whether it be your home or the home of a friend or family member.

2 Make every effort to save anything that might contain DNA.

Therefore, you should not urinate, bathe or shower, change clothes, comb hair, clean up, or move anything the rapist may have touched before seeking medical care.

3 Seek medical attention immediately. It's vital that you get checked for possible injuries, pregnancy, and sexually transmitted infections, including HIV testing, regardless of your decision to report the crime to the police.

4 Forensic medical exams are available. Forensic medical exams collect and preserve DNA evidence. You have the right to accept or deny any part of the exam. You do not have to report your assault to the police in order to receive a forensic medical exam.

If You Suspect You Have Been Drugged

*Tests can provide valuable information. It is important to contact a trusted resource* if you think you were sexually assaulted – the sooner, the better.*

1 Try to get medical help immediately.

2 Try not to urinate before getting help.

3 To preserve evidence if you were sexually assaulted, don't douche, bathe or change clothes before getting help.

4 When possible, save the glass or the beverage in which the drug was dissolved for testing.

5 You can contact your local rape crisis center or law enforcement agency for drug testing and resource information. *Most substances can be detected through appropriate drug testing, usually through a simple urine test.

SAFE Exam

Sexual Assault Forensic Exam (SAFE)

If you're a victim of sexual assault, you don't have to report the crime to the police to have an exam. You also don't have to pay for your own forensic exam.

A sexual assault forensic exam (SAFE) is a specific exam given to victims of sexual assault and abuse. This exam preserves possible DNA evidence and allows victims to receive important medical care. You don't have to report the crime to have an exam, but the process gives you the chance to safely store evidence should you decide to report at a later time.

Why should you consider having a sexual assault medical forensic exam?

It won't cost you. You should not be charged for the exam. The Violence Against Women Act requires states

To find a local hospital or healthcare facility that can provide a sexual assault forensic exam (SAFE), contact the National Sexual Assault Hotline at 1-800-656-HOPE (4673).

The hotline will connect you to a sexual assault resource in your area and, in some instances, can send an advocate to accompany you through the evidence collection process.

to provide free sexual assault forensic exams if they wish to remain eligible for critical anti-crime grant funding. If you are charged for the exam, immediately contact your local sexual assault service provider.

Getting a forensic exam increases the likelihood of prosecution. Not only does DNA evidence carry weight in court, but it may prevent future sexual assaults from occurring. Even if the perpetrator is not prosecuted, their DNA may be added to the national database, making it easier to connect the perpetrator to a future crime.

You can have time to decide if you want to report and the decision to report the crime is entirely yours. Having a sexual assault forensic exam ensures that the forensic evidence will be safely preserved if you decide to report at a later time.

For more information on filing a claim, contact the Crime Victim Services Commission at 517-373-7373 or the Victims Only toll-free at 1-877-251-7373.

SANE Nurse

Sexual Assault Nurse Examiner (SANE)

A specially trained sexual assault nurse examiner, or SANE, provides first-response care to sexual assault patients in either hospital or non-hospital settings, 24-hours-a-day.<sup>2</sup>

SANE nurses strive to preserve their patients' dignity while performing the forensic exam, to ensure that victims are not retraumatized by the exam, and to assist victims in gaining control by allowing them to make the decisions throughout the evidence collection process.<sup>3</sup> SANE nurses can also testify in any legal proceedings related to the exam.<sup>4</sup>

How to Find A SANE Nurse After an Assault?

To find SANE services near you, contact a local sexual assault organization online or by calling 1-800-656-HOPE.

You can also go to the Michigan Let's End Campus Sexual Assault website at www.michigan.gov/campussexualassault. Click on Medical Care, then click on Local Sexual Assault Services. From there, you can search for services by region or by county.

Even if your community doesn't have a SANE program, every hospital emergency room in Michigan is required to provide a medical forensic examination to a person stating that they have been sexually assaulted in the previous five days and are seeking an exam. (MCL 333.21527.)<sup>5</sup>

The Emotional and Physical Expression of Trauma

Understanding the Traumatic Experience

When someone lives through an extremely intense event, for example being involved in a car accident, they may experience a flood of reactions and emotions. When we experience extreme stress, hormones are released in the brain and greatly impact how memory is encoded, or stored, and how the brain processes what is happening. During stress and trauma, memories are stored as sensory fragments – rather than sequential events. It can be difficult to later relay these memories in the actual context and order they occurred.

The Freeze Response

Paralysis in Victims of Sexual Assault and Rape

You may have heard of “fight or flight” which is a biological response in mammals, including humans, that prepares the body to either fight back against a threat, or flee from a threatening situation. This response is activated after your brain recognizes a situation is very dangerous. Stress (or adrenal) hormones are then released which give your body the energy to fight back or get away to safety.

A lesser known biological reaction is the “freeze response.” When this happens, you enter into a temporary state of paralysis and your body can’t

Why Does This Matter?

In the immediate aftermath of a traumatic event, such as sexual assault, you may have difficulty relaying your experience to law enforcement or medical personnel. You may display a wide range of emotions, or show no emotions at all. You may be able to recount specific sensory details about the assailant (smells, textures), or the location in which the assault took place (lights, colors and sounds), but have more difficulty reporting exactly what took place and in what order.

For law enforcement, medical staff, or anyone else, this disorganized recount of events may seem suspicious, contradictory, or confusing. Being given ample time to relay the memories of the traumatic event can be the first step toward healing for many survivors.

move, can’t fight back, or move away to safety. These stress-induced responses are automatic and occur without conscious thought. Your brain is hard-wired to pick which response it deems best for survival.

Can This Happen to Assault Victims?

Many survivors of sexual assault and rape experience this “freeze response” during the attack. It’s very frightening, confusing, and can be detrimental to the healing process. You may not understand why you couldn’t move, fight back, scream, or defend yourself in any way.

It’s important for you to know that this is a normal and completely biological response to trauma and not something you could have controlled.

What You May be Feeling After an Assault

Being sexually assaulted or raped is a very traumatic experience and it’s important to remember that you will need time to recover. Human beings respond very strongly to traumatic events, both physically and emotionally. Your body, mind, and emotions have to process what has happened and then find ways to begin the healing process. Responses to the assault may be immediate or delayed.

While not two survivors will feel and respond the same, there are common trauma recovery effects you may experience after an assault.

PHYSICAL EFFECTS

- changes in eating patterns
- changes in sleeping patterns/nightmares
- eating disorders
- fatigue
- gastrointestinal irritability
- headaches
- muscular tension
- substance abuse
- soreness
- stress-related depression
- immune system responses

EMOTIONAL EFFECTS

- anger
- shock
- fear
- anxiety
- denial

Approximately 80% of sexual assault crimes are committed by someone the victim knows.

- depression, sadness
- embarrassment, feeling exposed, humiliated
- hopelessness
- mood swings
- obsessions/compulsions/phobias
- sense of unreality/numbness
- shame, guilt, self-blame

COGNITIVE EFFECTS

- difficulty concentrating
- difficulty getting things accomplished
- flashbacks
- replaying the circumstances of the assault
- wondering if other people can sense what happened to me
- worrying others will reject you
- worrying others will blame you

SOCIAL EFFECTS

- fear of being alone
- fear of leaving house (especially alone)
- fear/nervousness in crowds
- hypersensitivity when relating to others
- loss of trust in self and others
- withdrawal from people, relationships, activities
- difficulty with intimacy
- disruption in sexual relations

Adapted from “Common Reactions to Sexual Assault,” University of Michigan’s Sexual Assault Prevention & Awareness Center (SAPAC).

Alcohol and Drug-Facilitated Sexual Assaults

There are several odorless and tasteless drugs that can be used to render you unconscious or heavily sedated and unable to ward off attackers.

The use of alcohol and drugs to commit sexual assaults continues to be a substantial problem. Alcohol remains the drug perpetrators use most often.

There are other common drugs used to facilitate rape and sexual assaults that are largely colorless, tasteless and odorless and can be slipped into someone's drink without notice.

These drugs:

- act rapidly
- make you feel heavily intoxicated and unable to communicate
- can last up to 24-48 hours when combined with alcohol
- cause blurred vision
- can cause a deep, unresponsive sleep
- can cause amnesia
- can cause respiratory depression
- when combined with other drugs or alcohol, can result in coma or even death

Rohypnol

A central nervous system depressant ten times more potent than Valium. The victim may feel intoxicated and eventually may lose consciousness.

Common street names include:

Roachies, La Rocha, Roche, Rope, Roofies, Ruffles, Mexican Valium, Forget-Me Pill, Mind Erasers, Stupifi, Shays, Rib, R2, and Roach 2

GHB (Gamma Hydroxy Butyrate)

GHB is a depressant with anesthetic qualities. It can cause deep sleep, nausea, amnesia, convulsions, and loss of consciousness.

Common street names include:

Liquid Ecstasy, Liquid X, Scoop, Easy Lay, Georgia Home Boy, Grievous Bodily Harm, Max, and G

Ketamine

A fast-acting general anesthetic that is used as an animal tranquilizer. Effects can include numbness, hallucinations, trembling, convulsions, and loss of consciousness.

Common street names include:

K, Special K, Vitamin K, Ket, Kit Kat, Cat Valium, Purple, and Super C

Party Smart

REMEMBER: The legal drinking age in Michigan is 21 years old.

Stick with friends. Agree with one or more friends that you will look out for each other at parties or other social events. If any of your friends seem to be getting extremely intoxicated, get them out of the situation. Being a good friend could save their life.

Don't accept a drink that you didn't see being made.

Only drink from a can or bottle that you have opened yourself.

If someone offers to get you a drink from a bar or at a party, go with the person to order your drink. Watch the drink being poured and carry it yourself.

Listen for the "fizz" on twist-off bottles. If the bottle opens too easily, get a new one.

Be wary if someone wants you to go outside for "fresh air," especially if it is someone you have just met.

If you're in a conversation where your attention may be averted, put your hand over your drink.

Don't drink from public "punch bowls" or "trash cans" at parties.

If your drink is left unattended, throw it out.

If you hear someone joking about date rape drugs, leave the party.

If your drink tastes salty or soapy or has particles in it, throw it out.

Pay attention to the behavior of people around you. Tell a trusted friend if you feel you are becoming severely intoxicated after only one or two drinks.

Don't share or exchange drinks.

Campus Sexual Assault Laws and Policies

Under federal law Title IX, all schools are required to have systems in place to respond to sexual assault.

Under the federal law Title IX, all schools are required to have systems in place to respond to reports of sexual assault. Every school or school district that receives federal funding (which includes almost all colleges and universities, as well as public elementary, middle and secondary schools) is required to designate and/or adequately train at least one employee to coordinate the recipient's Title IX responsibilities. Victims of sexual assault can contact their school's Title IX coordinator at any time to receive interim protective measures and begin the school investigation process if they wish to do so.

The Campus Sexual Violence Elimination Act (SaVE)

The SaVE Act imposes new obligations on colleges and universities. It also clarifies the rights of victims of sexual assault, domestic violence, dating violence or stalking on campus. It gives victims a new ability to appeal an outcome. It also requires schools to inform victims of their rights and options, and to tell them where to get counseling and legal help.

The Campus Sexual Violence Elimination Act (SaVE)<sup>1</sup> was added to the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) in 2013.

The SaVE Act requires all colleges and universities to:

- disclose incidents of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking in annual campus crime statistic reports.
- to provide training programs for students and employees addressing the issues of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking, as well as “safe and positive” options for bystander interventions.

<sup>1</sup> The Cleary Act requires public and private colleges and universities to disclose information about crimes that are committed on or near campus, including crimes of sexual violence. In 2013, the Campus SaVE Act amended the 1990 Cleary Act.

The process for handling sexual assaults will vary for each school – but all victims have the same rights.

Victims can have input into creating the interim measures that address their needs on campus, such as:

- Adjustments made to class schedules;
- Changes to campus living arrangements;
- Receive information about existing counseling, health, mental health, victim advocacy, legal assistance and other services available;
- Assistance with deadlines for coursework and exams;
- Obtain a no-contact directive or restraining order.

All students or employees reporting an assault will be provided with their written rights to:

- Have the matter handled by appropriately trained, unbiased officials;
- Be accompanied by a support person during the investigation;
- Provide evidence and names of witnesses to the investigator;
- Receive regular status updates about the investigation and any outcomes or sanctions;
- Have an equal opportunity as the accused person to participate at every level of the investigation;
- Be protected from any retaliation for having made a complaint of sexual assault.

It's never too late to talk to the police about a sexual assault.<sup>1</sup>

Human Trafficking

There are two severe forms of human trafficking: sex trafficking and labor trafficking.

In 2017, there were 305 human trafficking cases reported by the state of Michigan.

Every year, human traffickers generate billions of dollars in profit by victimizing millions of people worldwide.

Human trafficking is a crime involving the exploitation of someone for the purpose of labor or a commercial sex act, through the use of force, fraud, or coercion.

Human trafficking affects individuals across the world, including the United States, and more specifically, Michigan.

The National Human Trafficking Hotline reported that Michigan ranked 6th in the number of calls made to its hotline in 2016 (838 calls). In 2017, there were 305 human trafficking cases reported by the state of Michigan.

Traffickers are estimated to exploit 40.3 million victims, with an estimated 25 million victims in forced labor and 15 million victims in forced marriage.

Sex Trafficking is the recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, obtaining, patronizing, or soliciting of a person for the purposes of a commercial sex act, in which the commercial sex act is induced by force, fraud, or coercion, or in which the person induced to perform such an act is not yet 18 years of age.

Labor Trafficking the recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, or obtaining of a person for labor or services, through the use of force, fraud, or coercion, for the purposes of subjection to involuntary servitude, peonage, debt bondage, or slavery.

Myths and Misconceptions about Human Trafficking

MYTH: Human trafficking is essentially a crime that must involve some form of travel, transportation, or movement across state or national borders.

TRUTH: Trafficking does not require transportation. Although transportation may be involved as a control mechanism to keep victims in unfamiliar places, it is not a required element of the trafficking definition. Human trafficking is not synonymous with forced migration or smuggling, which involve border crossing.

MYTH: Human trafficking only occurs in illegal underground industries.

TRUTH: Trafficking can occur in legal and legitimate business settings as well as underground markets. Human trafficking has been reported in business markets such as restaurants, hotels, and manufacturing plants, as well as underground markets such as commercial sex in residential brothels and street-based commercial sex.

MYTH: Human trafficking victims always come from situations of poverty or from small rural villages.

TRUTH: Although poverty can be a factor in human trafficking because it is often an indicator of vulnerability, poverty alone is not a single causal factor or universal indicator of a human trafficking victim. Trafficking victims can come from a range of income levels, and many may come from families with higher socioeconomic status.

MYTH: Trafficked persons can only be foreign nationals or are only immigrants from other countries.

TRUTH: The federal definition of human trafficking includes both U.S. citizens and foreign nationals. Both are protected under the federal trafficking statutes. Human trafficking within the United States affects victims who are U.S. citizens, lawful permanent residents, visa holders, and undocumented workers.

Ask Yourself

I have the right to...

I have the right to say what I would like to say without worrying about making you angry and what will happen if you do become angry.

And I have the right to...

- ...wear my hair the way I want.
- ...relax sometimes.
- ...do what I want to do.
- ...be boring if I choose to be boring.
- ...visit with people without having to call anyone to get permission.
- ...dress the way I choose.
- ...voice my opinion without getting criticized for it.
- ...continue my education.
- ...have my own space.
- ...get away from the kids sometimes.
- ...say no to sex.
- ...choose my own friends—male or female.

...and I have the right to...

- ...talk on the telephone.
- ...go places with my parents, siblings, and other members of my family.
- ...be treated with respect.
- ...have a driver's license.
- ...drive the car.
- ...have pets.
- ...spend money as I choose.
- ...choose and follow my own religion.
- ...have my own beliefs, thoughts, and feelings.
- ...not be criticized about my family.
- ...do things to make myself look and feel attractive.

- ...look nice for my own benefit.
- ...be sloppy when I feel like it.
- ...quiet time by myself, including bathroom time.
- ...take a nap when I'm tired.
- ...have a job.
- ...not have anyone control my schedule.
- ...work for whom I want.

...live peacefully without having to fear any physical abuse.

Michigan's Sex Offender Registry

www.michigan.gov/msp

(517) 214-1806

The Michigan State Police (MSP) Public Sex Offender Registry (PSOR) is made available online with the intent to better assist the public in preventing and protecting against the commission of future criminal sexual acts by convicted sex offenders.

PSOR information is updated regularly by the MSP in a continuous effort to provide complete and accurate information to the public.

The Michigan Public Sex Offender Registry website includes:

- ▶ offender's name
- ▶ date of birth
- ▶ photo
- ▶ registration details
- ▶ physical characteristics
- ▶ identifying numbers
- ▶ known alias(es)
- ▶ scars, marks, tattoos
- ▶ offense information
- ▶ address information
- ▶ campus information
- ▶ employment information
- ▶ vehicle information

Email Notification Sign-Up

From the PSOR website you can sign-up for email alerts that will notify you of the movements of a specific offender.

Once you have registered to track a particular offender you will be notified via email any time the offender moves, changes employment, or enrolls in school.

Note: After leaving the state, offenders will no longer appear on the PSOR website and are no longer active registrants unless they relocate back to Michigan.

Once in the new state, offenders must comply with the registry requirements of that state.

The following website enables citizens to search the latest information from all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and numerous Indian tribes for the identity and location of known sex offenders:

www.fbi.gov/scams-and-safety/sex-offender-registry

In addition, the National Sex Offender Public Website (NSOPW) allows citizens to search the sex offender registries of participating states:

www.nsopw.gov

Can victim information be released?

NO. Michigan law does not allow the release of victim information.
